

TRUST LED TO SUICIDE.

Butcher Who Lost His Job Kills Himself in His Cell in Tenderloin Station.

HAD CARRIED A PISTOL.

Friends Say That He Was Despondent Because the Meat Combine Threw Him Out of a Position.

Max Schletter, a prisoner in a Tenderloin station-house cell on the unimportant charge of carrying a pistol without a permit, took his arrest so much to heart that he took his own life shortly before the hour for taking prisoners to court to-day, and the method employed was most ingenious and apparently the only way he could have accomplished his purpose with the lack of facilities at hand.

Schletter was in the middle cell in the bottom tier of five. The furniture consisted of one of the benches along the side of the cell and the sink at the rear end of the cell. Schletter was all right when the doorman inspected the row at 5.30 o'clock this morning, but when he went around to awaken the prisoners in preparation for going to court Schletter was stooping over the sink as if for the relief of nausea. Dred held up his light to get a closer view, and then he saw something white above the prisoner's head.

Investigation revealed that Schletter had removed a shoestring from one of his shoes. Attached to it was his handkerchief. The shoe lace was tied about his neck, and it was so short that it cut into his neck in tying. Then the handkerchief had been fastened to the shoelace, and to make his improvised gallows operative, the suicide had stooped over the sink, drawing the cord taut and remaining in that position until strangulation rendered him unconscious. The man toppled over just as the doorman entered, but he was quite dead when an ambulance surgeon arrived from New York Hospital.

Lost His Position.
At No. 302 East Ninth street Mr. and Mrs. Strabu said Schletter was a victim of the Meat Trust's oppression.

He lodged in this house, he had been in America three years and came of excellent family in Germany. A Broadway lounge who saw Schletter flourishing a revolver in a theatre crowd last night, says he was then shouting incoherently about the Beef Trust being his murderer.

T. J. O'BRIEN OUTING.

There'll Be a Hot Time to-Morrow at The Farm, Williamsbridge.

An event that will depopulate the east end of Harlem of its most prominent politicians to-morrow is the outing of the T. J. O'Brien Association at The Farm, in Williamsbridge. Moving vans will work all night conveying solid and liquid refreshments to the scene of the festivities, and when the guests ride over from the train to-morrow morning everything will be in readiness for a joyous day.

The feature of the event will be the ball game between the "Hallbirds," and the "Pickers." The last game was played at the outing two years ago, and it is only within a few weeks that the participants have recovered. Huge sums of money have been wagered on the contest, which is scheduled to go only three innings, as The Farm is not equipped with electric lights.

GRAND JURY MAY TAKE UP GOOD GROUND TRAGEDY.

District-Attorney Smith to Offset Tactics of Disbrow's Lawyer—Inquest Off Indefinitely.

GOOD GROUND, L. I., June 21.—Should Deputy Sheriff Rogers fail to serve Louis Disbrow with a subpoena to appear before Coroner Nugent District-Attorney Livingston Smith intimates he will place all the facts which he has gathered in connection with the drowning of "Dimple" Lawrence and Clarence Foster before the Suffolk County Grand Jury.

Disbrow will be given an opportunity to appear before that body if he chooses, but his attendance will not be forced, as he can refuse if he wishes to answer questions on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

It is not usual to place a murder investigation before a Grand Jury until the suspected person is arraigned for preliminary hearing before a committing magistrate, but District-Attorney Smith, seeing that Disbrow's lawyer is pursuing the same tactics as were so successfully employed in Florence Burns's case, has determined to circumvent it by laying the case before the Grand Jury and letting that body establish whether a crime was committed and who is to be placed on trial for it. It is in the province of a Grand Jury to investigate all cases where crime is suspected.

Practical Joker's Yarn.

But little credence is placed in the statements of Jacob Eisenblau, a local butcher, who claims he saw Louis Disbrow in Richmond Hill, and was assured by that young man he would come to Good Ground to-day. Eisenblau is regarded by the townfolk as a practical joker. He repeated the story to-day and offered to wager $5 that he could prove his assertion.

"I know Disbrow," he said. "I guess I ought to know him by this time. He treated and said he was coming here to-day."

Eisenblau goes down to Jamaica to buy his meat, and it was while on his purchasing tour that he says he met Disbrow.

Disbrow was rumored to have been in Quogue last night, but the Pinkerton man who went down on the rumor was unable to find him.

Broken Oar Found.

The broken oar found floating in some refuse in Shinnecock Bay strengthens the theory that young Foster was struck down with his own oar. It is believed that the occupant of Nelson Squire's boat, after reaching the boat containing the couple, snatched an oar from the hand of Foster, who was not expecting the move. This oar is believed to have been broken over the young man's head. This is the oar found yesterday by Warren Corwin. The blade of the oar had been broken off.

The date of Coroner Nugent's inquest has been postponed indefinitely. Without Disbrow the inquest would amount to nothing.

SAYS DISBROW WILL NOT APPEAR.

NORTHPORT, L. I., June 21.—"If Louis A. Disbrow values my advice and follows it he will not appear in Good Ground or that vicinity either to-day or any other day until the attitude of the authorities changes," said Lawyer Rowland Miles to an Evening World reporter at his home here to-day.

"I hardly believe that young Disbrow was seen in Richmond Hill yesterday by Jacob Eisenblau, the butcher from Good Ground, as is reported," Mr. Miles continued. "But, of course, I can't say it is positively untrue. I will not even say it is possible for Disbrow to have been in Richmond Hill yesterday."

"So far my client has followed my advice minutely and explicitly, and I see no reason why he should disregard it now. My reasons for keeping Disbrow in seclusion are as strong as ever. Until the District-Attorney either issues a warrant charging Disbrow with homicide or ceases to tacitly accuse him I shall maintain my attitude."

DECLARES DISBROW IS NOT AT HOME.

RICHMOND HILL, L. I., June 21.—Douglas Disbrow, brother of the missing and much wanted Louis A. Disbrow, assured an Evening World reporter to-day that the suspect in the Foster-Lawrence tragedy at Good Ground had not been at his father's home here yesterday, as reported.

"Louis certainly would not have been within two blocks of our home, as this man Eisenblau asserts," said Douglas, "without visiting us. None of our family knows Louis's whereabouts, but none of us believe he is near here. All his affairs are in the hands of Lawyer Miles."

She went to the East One Hundred and Fourth street station, and from her description Detective Dickson recognized "Bad Alex" as the culprit. Magistrate Mott committed the lad to the Gerry Society, but Court Officer Brennan, catching sight of him as he was leaving the room, brought him back.

Then he produced a warrant charging the lad with assault on Miss Rose Anastasia, a teacher in Public School No. 109. She had caused "Bad Alex's" dismissal from the school and when he met her on the street one day last week he knocked her down. The Magistrate then raised the bail another $100.

CAR CONDUCTOR IS HELD FOR ASSAULT.

Employee on Madison Avenue Line, It Is Alleged, Violently Ejected a Passenger, Badly Injuring Him.

William Bunker, of No. 119 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street, a conductor on the Madison avenue division of the Interurban Traction Company, was arraigned in Yorkville Police Court to-day charged with assaulting and ejecting Isaac Parker, of No. 31 East Seventy-eighth street, from a Madison avenue car last night at Sixty-fourth street and Madison avenue.

Mr. Parker sustained injuries which prevented his appearing against the prisoner.

Mr. Parker boarded the prisoner's car at about 8 o'clock and tendered a Fifty-ninth street cross-town car transfer.

Bunker declined to accept it, saying it was an hour and a half old. Parker denied this, and insisted on riding without paying an extra fare.

At Sixty-fourth street, it is alleged,

KING RECEIVES PEACE AGREEMENT.

Historic Document Handed to Monarch at Windsor Castle This Afternoon by Col. Hubert Hamilton.

LONDON, June 21.—Col. Hubert Hamilton, who was entrusted to bring home the original South African peace agreement, delivered the historic document signed by the Boers to King Edward at Windsor Castle this afternoon.

Col. Hamilton remained at the castle for dinner, at which Sousa's march, "Imperial Edward," was played for the first time by the band of the Scots Guards.

A handsome illuminated vellum copy of the match has been presented to the King.

The conductor seized Mr. Parker and dragged him off the car with such force that he fell, injuring his head. He was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital and from there to his home.

The conductor was held in $100 bail and the hearing was set down for Monday.

BANKER HERE AFTER HIS CHILD.

Alice Jennison, Now Held by Mother, May Be Kidnapped a Third Time.

Four-year-old Alice Jennison, the heroine of two kidnapping exploits, is again in New York and in her mother's possession. She is being kept in the strictest seclusion because of fear of Frank E. Jennison, the father, attempting to regain possession of the child. He has followed Mrs. Jennison and the child here.

The child's parents are fighting each other in the divorce courts. She was in her mother's custody until last Saturday, when Mr. Jennison kidnapped her from her nurse in Riverside Drive. Mrs. Jennison on Monday located her husband in the Buckingham Hotel, but he escaped her and got the little one to Greenwich, Conn. Through the aid of her lawyers, Blandy, Mooney & Shipman, of No. 7 Wall street, Mrs. Jennison located the child, and with the assistance of detectives, drawn revolvers and spurious warrants she yesterday regained possession of the girl.

The Father Follows.

Mr. Jennison followed, determined to get back the babe by fair means or foul, and the end of the Jennison family kidnapping episodes is not in sight. Legal action to decide the right to the child's custody has been instituted by a habeas corpus proceeding being brought by Mrs. Jennison following the kidnapping of Alice last Monday. So far Jennison has evaded service.

After Saturday's kidnapping Mr. Jennison, who is a partner in the banking firm of Dunscomb & Jennison, at No. 2 Wall street, went to Indian Harbor, Conn., with the child, a nurse and Mr. Gibbons. They stopped at the Held House, where they were joined on Tuesday by a Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Massey, of New York, who turned out to be in the employ of Mrs. Jennison's lawyers. Wednesday, Mrs. Jennison and Alice's former nurse arrived in Greenwich.

Second Kidnapping Plot.

Shortly after noon yesterday kidnapping plot No. 2 came to a head. Alice and her nurse went out for a walk with Mr. Jennison and Mr. Gibbons as bodyguard, and Mr. and Mrs. Massey accompanying them. Two carriages drove down the road and at a signal from Massey their occupants leaped out.

Mrs. Jennison grabbed her husband about the throat and held him tightly. She is a little woman and he is six feet tall and athletic, but he was helpless. Meanwhile the nurse seized Alice, and, jumping into a carriage, was driven rapidly away. Mr. Gibbons drew his revolver, but two men who were with Mrs. Jennison produced two documents and shouted that they were warrants. The weapon was put up, and while the men read the warrants to Mr. Jennison his wife slipped into a carriage and drove off after her child. The warrants were court writs issued here and were valueless in Connecticut.

Realizing the trick, Mr. Jennison dashed to the hotel to telephone for assistance, but the wires had been conveniently cut. When word was sent to Constable Nedley, at East Porchester, on the State line, to apprehend Mrs. Jennison or the child, it was too late.

GIRL ELUDED ANGRY FATHER.

Fled from Him in Court When the Judge Told Parent to Take Her Home.

(Special to The Evening World.)
MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., June 21.—The spectators in the Court of Special Sessions, at Mount Vernon, witnessed a battle royal this morning when Jacob Thomas, of Spring Valley, N. Y., attempted to compel his fifteen-year-old daughter, Lena, to return home with him.

The child had been arraigned before Judge Bennett on complaint of the father, who had charged her with being disorderly, inasmuch as she ran away from home and was employed in a saloon as a barmaid and servant.

Judge Bennett decided that the child could not be technically defined as a disorderly child, but that the father had a right to use force to compel her to return home with him. When the child learned that she had to go with her father she began to cry and begged her counsel, Corporation Counsel Marshall to protect her.

Messrs. Stillwell and Ingie, who represented the father, told him to take his child and go home. The father started for Lena and she jumped over a number of chairs inside of the railing and attempted to escape, followed closely by her angry parent. The father was gaining on the child when Lawyer Marshall, Fred Johnson and a number of others who sympathized with her, went to her rescue. Marshall and Johnson stepped between the father and child and prevented the former from getting hold of Lena.

While Marshall, Johnson and the women were pushing and shoving one another around the court-room, Lena ran out into the hall down a flight of stairs and sought refuge in Marshall's office. Marshall followed the child and arrived at his office door in time to prevent Thomas and his lawyers from entering.

"If you dare to enter my office," said Marshall, "I'll break your face," addressing his conversation to Thomas and his attorneys.

Stillwell and Ingie went away, vowing that they would get a writ of habeas corpus to compel Marshall to produce the child.

COL. GAYNOR SENT BACK TO MONTREAL.

With Greene He Is Remanded to Custody of Jailer—Habeas Corpus Writs Are Quashed.

QUEBEC, June 21.—Messrs. Gaynor and Greene, who were remanded to the Quebec jail this morning by Judge Caron, sitting in Chambers, were brought into court later and by Justice Andrews were remanded to Jailer Vallee, of Montreal.

When Justice Andrews, accompanied by Justice Climon, took his seat, he immediately rendered judgment on the rule for contempt against Detective Carpenter, who made the arrests in Quebec, discharging the motion.

The judgment was a very elaborate one, and concluded by rejecting the petitions for writs of certiorari, quashing the writs of habeas corpus and ordering that the prisoners be remanded to Jailer Vallee, of Montreal, there to be dealt with, and ordering Sheriff Langellier to deliver both prisoners to the Montreal Jailer.

LOVE MYSTERY ON LA SAVOIE.

Young Man and Pretty Girl Bride Said to Have Eloped from Paris.

A story of romance, with a substantial element of mystery, came to light to-day when the French liner La Savoie docked at her pier here.

It was declared that a young couple aboard the ship, whose names appeared on the passenger list as Mr. and Mrs. Schliemann, had eloped from Paris, and that they would be detained on Ellis Island by the immigration authorities, in obedience to a cablegram from the bridegroom's father.

The angry parent, it was declared, asserted that the two were not married legally, and cabled to the law firm of Couderet Brothers to have his son deported if possible.

Mr. Schliemann, sr., is said to be the most famous living discoverer of antiquities.

The young man who appeared as Mr. Schliemann on La Savoie's passenger list, when seen on the steamer, said that he had just finished a five-year course in the University of Paris and was now entitled to the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. His marriage, he said, took place in Paris before a civil authority. His bride is only sixteen and very pretty.

Her maiden name could not be learned, every one connected with the affair preserving the greatest secrecy. The young wife's first name, however, is Nadine. Her father, it is said, is a very rich Greek merchant.

A member of the firm of Couderet Brothers, who boarded the steamship at quarantine, said that as the bridegroom was an American citizen he thought that both he and his girl wife would be allowed to go free. The lawyer refused to discuss the case, saying that orders from France enjoined him to secrecy.

The young bridegroom did not seem to be in the least disturbed by his predicament. He checked his baggage and the baggage of his wife to the Waldorf-Astoria.

Many of La Savoie's passengers were telling of a race which took place last Sunday between the Frenchman and the American liner St. Paul. The French ship won.

Among the passengers were John Bigelow, formerly United States Minister to France, who was aboard with his daughter Grace.

WRECK BLOCKS TRACK.

TRENTON, N. J., June 21.—The breaking of an axle caused the wrecking of a freight train on the New York division of the Pennsylvania Railroad about two miles east of Trenton about 4 o'clock this morning.
